27. The Last Wave The Current The Criterion Collection

A sense of foreboding pervades an opening scene of Peter Weir's The Last Wave, though the sun shines and young children play cricket as usual during recess at school. Then, suddenly, the wind picks up, dust rolls in like waves from the distance, and the children and their teacher race indoors, where bricks of hail pierce the windows and gouge their fragile skin. It is a classic horror image ...
